To a Crawford Heating Stove is a long, long stride, yet each has occupied the same relative position—the best for the purpose in its day. The Crawford's day is now.

A Down to the Minute Home Heater

With a fuel saving draft—principle that stops the flow of heat skyward through the chimney and throws it out room-ward through its vast expanse of radiating surface it merits the exacting requirements of the economic housewife in supplying the greatest possible amount of heat with the smallest possible amount of fuel.

Careful buyers who look carefully into the whys and wherefores for themselves invariably buy Crawford heaters.

SECOND SESSION OF SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Ushering in of New Term Marked by Little Formality.

Interests Centres About Wilson's Re-Appearance to Deliver Address.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Congress today settled down to the second stage of what promises to be the longest continuous session in its history. The regular December session, following without a break on the heels of the long extra session that has run since April 7, brought the tired lawmakers today new problems and the prospect of steady work for many months.

There was little formality about the ushering in of the new Congress at noon. Its advent was signalled by the fall of the gavel in each house, with the announcement of the presiding officer that the second session of the Sixty-third Congress had begun.

A widespread demand for tickets for the gallery for tomorrow's session indicated the interest that centres about the President's re-appearance at the Capitol to deliver a Presidential address. The President will read his first general message to Congress at a joint session of the two houses at 1 o'clock tomorrow and it is expected that he will touch on many of the problems to be taken up at the new session.

The Senate practically merged the old session into the new one by meeting at 10 o'clock today to wind up the work of the dying session. Vice President Marshall, who has been absent for several weeks, was in his place again as presiding officer. Democratic leaders were prepared to push the currency bill forward as the chief business and to hold the Senate in daily sessions from 10 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night until it is disposed of. While the Senate is working on currency legislation and disposing of the Hetch Ketchy water supply bill during the early days of the new session, the House will start work on the great appropriations bills carrying more than $1,000,000,000 worth of funds for the needs of the government during the year that begins next July.

The annual estimates made by the Treasury Department were presented to the House when it assembled at noon. Preliminary work by the appropriations committees has brought several of the supply bills near completion and an effort will be made to pass the $13,000,000 District of Columbia bill and the fortifications appropriations bill before Christmas.

Democratic members of the Senate worked all day yesterday to complete their agreement on the currency bill, so the measure might be pushed for immediate consideration today. Senate leaders hope that by holding the Senate to long hours the bill may be passed in time to permit a short recess at the holidays. If it has not been acted on, the Senate will forego all vacation except Christmas day.

The extra session terminated in the Senate with the introduction of a few bills and a request to confirm some of President Wilson's nominations. Ten postmasters at small points were the only ones confirmed, and the Senate recessed until 11:55 o'clock.

As the noon hour arrived Vice President Marshall declared the old session "adjourned (without day)" dan in the next breath announced that Congress has assembled "in accordance with the constitution."

More formality marked the opening in the House. The chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden offered prayer, referring with emphasis to "the great economic and social problems which concern the welfare of the individual, the home, the government and religious life of the nation."

NO ADVANCE IN WAGES.

Fall River Plants Unable to Grant Increase at Present Time.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 1.—The Cotton Manufacturers' Association, through President George H. Hills, has sent to the Textile Council and the Stationary Firemen's Union letters stating that much and careful consideration of their requests for advance of wages has led to the unanimous conclusion of all manufacturers interested that conditions make it impossible to grant an increase at the present time. The Fall River Iron Works Company, which does not belong to the Cotton Manufacturers' Association, has sent, through President Bertram D. Borden, similar replies. The Textile Council, for the textile operatives and the Firemen's Union, for the mill firemen, asked for advances of 12 1-2 per cent to take effect December 8.

LOOMFIXERS FORCED OUT.

Weavers at Laurel Lake Mills Fall River, Remain on Strike.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 1.—About 130 weavers employed at the Laurel Lake mills here refused to return to work this morning, and will remain out in an endeavor to enforce demands for an increased payment per cut for cloth manufactured and a reduction in the number of looms operated by each employe. This action by the weavers forced the loomfixers out. The action of the weavers followed several conferences with the management, in which the requests were refused. With the exception of the weaving department, the entire plant is running today. It is claimed at the plant that about a dozen weavers are still working.

PLEASANT AND SUCCESSFUL.

Rear Admiral Badger Speaks of Fleet's Cruise to the Mediterranean.

VILLEFRANCHE, France, Dec. 1.—Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, before sailing yesterday on board flagship Wyoming on the return voyage to the United States of the American squadron, which has been distributed among the various ports of the Mediterranean for several weeks, said:

"This cruise of a portion of the Atlantic fleet of the United States navy to Mediterranean ports has been a most pleasant and successful one. Everywhere the greatest cordiality and courtesy were shown to the officers and men by the authorities and residents of the ports visited. The object of the cruise was to afford an opportunity to the officers and enlisted men to see foreign countries and to broaden their experience. This opportunity has been fully utilized and the officers and men of the American fleet carry home with them the highest appreciation of the kindness they have received everywhere."

The Wyoming, Utah and Delaware sailed Sunday afternoon. As they slowly drew out, the Wyoming's band struck up the "Marseillaise," and thousands of spectators who lined the shores fluttered handkerchiefs and cheered the departing Americans.

The ships of the American fleet will join company off Gibraltar and proceed together to the Azores. There the Fourth division, comprising the Connecticut, Ohio and Kansas, will proceed to Guantanamo, where the ships will coal prior to sailing for Mexican waters.

The sailor men won all hearts during their stay on the Riveira and their departure is viewed with genuine regret.

PROCEED TOWARD GIBRALTAR.

The Vermont, Ohio, Jason and Celtic Sail from Marseilles.

MARSEILLES, France, Dec. 1.—United States battleships Vermont and Ohio, with fuel ship Jason and supply ship Celtic, sailed from this port today after exchanging salutes with the French batteries. They will proceed to the vicinity of Gibraltar, where they will re-join the remainder of the American squadron which has been visiting European ports.

THE POLICE STATION SITE.

Aldermen and Mayor Acted Under Direction of Representative Council.

In view of the criticism of Mayor MacLeod's action in the police station site matter, it has been thought best to go to the public records for proof regarding the two varying statements. The city clerk's records show that May 27, 1913, the Representative Council adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Board of Aldermen obtain options on behalf of the city of Newport upon lands and properties upon Market square and advertise for competitive plans, specifications and estimates for a police station building and report the same to the Representative Council with their recommendations."

This action was taken by the Representative Council several months after the General Assembly had passed a law giving the city the right to condemn the land on either side of Market square, for a station. The Representative Council at its meeting in October unanimously directed the Board of Aldermen to purchase the land on the north side of the square. In every step the Board of Aldermen and the mayor acted under the direction of the Representative Council.

INDIANAPOLIS MAYOR IN CHARGE OF POLICE.

To Remain at Head Until Union Teamsters' Strike Ends.

Over 250 Citizens Sworn in as a Special Reserve Force.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—Mayor Wallace established headquarters at the police station early today, and said he would take personal charge of the police department until the strike of the union teamsters and chauffeurs, which began at midnigat last night, is settled. He said he and 100 mounted policemen and 400 patrolmen, and expected to be able to handle the situation without assistance from the state. In addition to the extra squads of police that patrolled the business district and kept the crowds on the move, more than 250 citizens, including some of the most prominent businessmen of Indianapolis, who were sworn in last night as a special reserve force, awaited an emergency call at Tomlinson hall, where they had established headquarters.

Thomas J. Farrell, general organizer of the union, said the strike order had been obeyed generally. "Our union is opposed to acts of violence," said Farrell. "There is no reason for lawlessness and I hope there will be none."

Teamsters and their friends were busy today harrasing drivers who ventured out with teams, and a large number of arests were made. Several attempts to congregate in the downtown district were quickly frustrated by the mounted police. Whenever groups of men lingered for a moment they were told to move on and if they did not comply the police used their new, long hickory riot club freely. Several pedestrians were beaten over the head and shoulders, but none were seriously injured.

MRS. STOCKWELL DEAD.

Wife of Y. M. C. A. Social Secretary Gives Birth to Twin Boys.

Mrs. Jennie C. Stockwell, wife of Mr. W. Gardner Stockwell, social secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, died early this morning of uraemic poisoning at her home on Division street. Sunday she gave birth prematurely to twin boys, and rapidly failed until her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Stockwell were married in Fitchburg, Mass., a year ago Christmas and had made their home here since. During her short residence, Mrs. Stockwell had made many friends in Newport, having been a member of Company Y of the Women's Auxiliary and assisted her husband in the social entertainments given at the Association.

Her father, Mr. Carlson, came from Fitchburg this morning. Rev. Franklin G. McKeever, D. D., pastor of the Second Baptist Church, will conduct a brief service Tuesday morning and the body will be taken to Fitchburg for interment. The babies, which are healthy, have been taken to the Newport Hospital.

INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE SUFFER

of goods from sidewalks, were they ordered off one day and allowed to come back another? Why should an unknown foreigner down town have been arrested when there were others much better able to stand the test, and probably also much more guilty?

You know the efforts made under any administration to make Newport appear to be the worst place in the country. Appeals were made to the governor; press and pulpit rang with condemnation of conditions. Yet these conditions were not in it with the conditions today. The people who then complained are silent now. Is vice under me a virtue under MacLeod? Ladies who seem interested have been giving pink teas to paramis and telling them how to bring up children, and there is not one among them who is a mother or a grandmother. They are well aware of the conditions which exist today, yet they are silent. So long as Boyle is not mayor you can apparently do anything you want in this community and you will not offend them.

We are going to have an honest election this year, something we did not have a year ago. I want to warn those who so deftly handled money last year on this point. I care not, as I said before, whether that money comes from rich widows, or from prospective candidates for high office in the future, or whether it is distributed from a real estate office or from a cobbler shop. The ment and their votes are going to rule this year, and not the dollar. The voters will decide whether the people of the city are to carry on their business without the meddlings of busy-bodies trying to tell them what they should do. It is a contest of elements and I represent the elements opposed to the rules which prevail now. They believe that money and men should rule. He referred to the address of that eminent scholar, Professor Burgess, to support this contention. It was an argument for money and not for men and brains, to rule.

There are in charge of the funds left for the relief of those in distress people who tell the poor what they should do instead of aiding them. He cited a story of a woman applying for aid, who was asked if she had any furniture in her front room, and when she answered "Yes" she was asked why she did not sell that, and this woman is receiving $1,000 to $1,200 a year. We have another who shadows decent people around the cliffs and other places. They are here for what they get out of it, and to tell us what to do We don't need them or their advice. They depend on making some believe we are worse than we are, in order to make good. These are things I know; they have been telling stories about me that are not so. They are trying to make Newport a little birds' nest and they want to sit in the nest. Newport is a watering place and should be conducted with that idea and with the spirit of the law always in mind.

Mr. MacLeod has only promises to make; he has had one year, which he says has been one of experience, and he promises for the future. It is not necessary for me to promise; you all know what I will do. I will give a safe administration of public office. I think with my experience I can come pretty close to doing what is right for the moral and material welfare of the city and will give better conditions than prevail today.

I am a candidate for mayor and will appreciate your support on Tuesday. It is not pleasant to come out to speak thus. I do not like self-glorification. It is two years since I appeared in public. Be not deceived by the promises I hear are being made of what will be done for this or that race. Those people have no use for them except to obtain their votes. I am willing and ready to serve you if elected, and hope it will be your pleasure to elect me.

Following the address by Mayor MacLeod on Washington square Saturday night Mr. Boyle spoke for a few minutes. He realized that the listeners had damp feet and had already listened to as much talk as they safely could, the trouble being the dampness and not the talk—so he was very brief speaking only about 10 minutes and promising to speak more fully at the Opera House Sunday night. What he said was covered by his later address in the Opera House Mr. Boyle had planned to speak longer, but he was afraid to take chance with his voice, which he desired to be in condition for the talk Sunday night. By his short speech he probably prevented many from having colds as they would have waited despite the dampness.

MIDDLETOWN.

Mr. George Gordon King Lectures on Japan and China at Berkeley.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

Special music was rendered by the vested choir from St. George's School Sunday at St. Columba, the Berkeley Memorial Chapel, conducted by Robert W. Hughes, choirmaster. The rector, Rev. Latta Griswold, was assisted by Rev. John B. Diman. Rev. Mr. Griswold, who was the preacher, took as his text: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

At the evening service, in the Berkeley parish house, Mr. George Gordon King, treasurer of the Board of Missions, gave an illustrated talk on Japan and China, exhibiting about 50 slides on each subject. Three years ago Mr. King spoke here on the work of the Board of Missions. The lecture was preceded by a short religious service, conducted by the rector, Rev. Latta Griswold. Mrs. John Molden acted as pianist.

The next in the series of illustrated lectures will be on "Our Bible in the Making," presented by Mrs. Elisha A. Peckham.

At the session of the Sunday School at the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday the adult classes assembled in the auditorium, to hear the report presented by Mrs. Mary W. Lawton, who attended the two days' session of the Sunday School convention in Providence the latter part of October.

Miss Phebe Thurston, who has been assisting in the home since the illness of Mrs. Charles Peckham, is visiting in Newport. Mrs. Deborah Calfds formerly of Middletown, is now with Mrs Peckham.

Mrs. George Irish left today for Fall River, where she will spend the week.

Miss M. May Ward, who is attending Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Herbert Ward.

Mrs. Eugene Sturtevant is visiting her youngest daughter Mrs. Henry Howard, in Brookline, Mass.

The choir at the Methodist Episcopal Church is preparing to give E. B. Ashley's cantata, "Holy Night," at Christmas.

The Christmas tree festival of the during the Christmas sale at Holy Cross guild house will be conducted by Mr. Lewis R. Manchester.

Mrs. Alton Coggeshall will supply the Oliphant School, commencing this morning, until a permanent principal can be secured to fill the position left vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Charles Hanson (formerly Miss Helen M. Sibley).

MANCHESTER CAPTURED.

Dartmouth Man, Charged With Killing Brother, Found in Portsmouth.

Portsmouth and Newport co-operated with Dartmouth and New Bedford Sunday in the capture in Portsmouth of Edward C. Manchester of Dartmouth, charged with shooting and instantly killing his brother, Frank W. Manchester, at their home Saturday afternoon. The Dartmouth and New Bedford officers were at work by 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and were still hunting unsuccessfully for the fugitive, when the chief at New Bedford received a telephone message from Charles H. Slason of New Bedford, stating that Manchester had just been seen on Quaker hill in Portsmouth. One of the New Bedford searching parties under Deputy Chief Parker was hurried in an automobile to Portsmouth and notice was sent to the Newport police.

Inspector Tobin at once notified Officer Coggeshall to aid in any way he could. Officer Coggeshall secured an automobile, went to Quaker Hill and joined the party from New Bedford, taking in an officer who knew Manchester. Town Sergeant Luther P. Chase and Mr. W. A. S. Cummings were in the party to aid through their knowledge of the roads. The automobiles separated a number of times, to cover more territory, and finally heard that the man they were looking for had just crossed some fields toward Union street. One automobile had just passed the waiting room of the Providence line near where the railroad leaves the road on Union street. It was about 5 o'clock and too light to see if any one was in the building, but just after the automobile passed Manchester stepped out and was taken. He offered no resistance.

He was brought to this city and locked up as a fugitive from justice, at the police station. At first he agreed to go back without a requisition, but later refused. When he reached the police station he asked for something to eat. He was tired and hungry, after about 30 hours of chase, and immediately after eating fell asleep. After the searching party had dinner at Allen's restaurant they returned to the station, where they found Manchester ready to return to Dartmouth without papers. At 6:50 the party started on their way back.

Manchester was told by Inspector Tobin his rights under the law but was also shown that the waiving of requisition papers would not hurt his case; the Massachusetts officers could take him in a day or two. When he had something to eat he felt different about returning and went back without trouble.

The visiting police officers were grateful to the Portsmouth and Newport officials and citizens for the willing aid given them in their chase.

Manchester was arraigned in the district court in New Bedford today, pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to December 13. Manchester will claim that the shooting was accidental and that his brother was shot while the two were struggling for the possession of the gun.

CONVERTING THE TURKS.

Dr. Haigazian Addresses Union Meeting of Newport Churches.

At a union meeting of the churches of Newport, held in the First Baptist Church Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. H. Haigazian, president of the Konia faculty of the Apostolic Institute of Turkey, and Rev. Howard C. Ives gave addresses on the work done in the city of Konia, Asia Minor, by the members of the Apostolic Institute. The addresses related to the attempt at conversion of the Mohammedan Turks. Rev. Joseph Cooper opened the meeting with prayer, and Rev. Ives introduced Dr. Haigazian, who is president of a college of 300 boys, heading the only Christian institution in a area of 80,000 square miles, with a population of 3,000,000.

Dr. Haigazian said in part: Centuries ago the land now occupied by Turkey was the seat of Christianity in the world, but when the Turks came it was changed into a place of Mohammedanism. Ever since the religion of the Mohammedans has flourished, and despite the efforts of many missionaries the attempt to introduce Christianity has failed. For this reason many eminent men think it is impossible to convert the Mohammedan.

By introducing schools in these places, and offering the people an equivalent of the Berkeley Memorial Chapel will be held at the Berkeley parish house Tuesday evening, December 23.

Mrs. Thomas S. Barker of Paradise avenue is confined to her home by illness, and is cared for by her daughter.

The chowder supper to be given education, the enlightenment obtained will enable these disbelievers to see the true side of Christianity. By the defeat of the Turkish troops by the Christian Balkan states the first real entering of Christianity has begun, and once Turkey is converted the other Mohammedan countries will follow.

Rev. Mr. Ives stated that work has been started for the erection of a new school for girls in Turkey. The amount needed is $100,000, and it is hoped to raise a large part of this the coming year. A collection was taken for this purpose at the end of the service. Dr. Ives will remain in Newport three or four days, and subscriptions will be appreciated.

DEFENDS HIS ADMINISTRATION.

was shouted from the crowd several times.

The official party then proceeded up Thames street to Washington square, followed by many of the audience at the first meeting. On the square the mayor opened by saying to the large crowd which gathered that it seemed an auspicious time to thank the people for the support they gave him last year. His election was a genuine surprise to him, and he had felt grave responsibility and was doubtful if he would be able to fill the office. He felt that he had little to talk about until Mr. Boyle criticised him, and it was to secure this criticism that he issued the challenge to the ex-mayor Thursday evening. He said he had tried to treat his opponent courteously and had been so treated by him last year, but he did not feel that the same kind of treatment was being given him this year. He therefore felt justified in saying some things now.

He then treated the several subjects on which he had spoken in the previous meeting, denied that he had been dishonest in any of his official doings, and said he did not believe Mr. Boyle really believed things he said Friday night, but had made statements just as campaign talk.

The 9 o'clock signal had sounded before he finished and he said he would ask the indulgence of Mr. Boyle, who also wished to speak on the square, for just a few minutes, and proceeded to close his remarks. He was given a generous hand-clapping.

The mayor concluded his speech-making with a meeting in the Colonial Theatre Sunday evening, speaking to an audience which filled the main body of the house and applauded the many telling points in the address. He was received with an outburst of applause which lasted fully a minute. His address, which was 55 minutes long, reviewed the work of the present year with which his administration has been connected and mapped out a program for the coming year. This included work for a new railroad station, for transfers on the street railways, for naval extension, continuance of the water works investigation, an investigation of the city gas, improvement of the approach to the Training Station, the widening of Bath road, the continuance of the motorizing of the fire department, a motor ambulance and changes in the city charter.

In beginning, the mayor said he believed he could show, in spite of criticism by Mr. Boyle, that the city has been benefitted during his administration, morally, physically and materially. The double tracking of Bath road and the extension of the street railway to Harrison avenue has been obtained after considerable difficulty, and both have been of much advantage to the city. A decided move has been made towards naval extension in Newport. The mayor did not claim all the credit for this, but said the hospitality of the city had made such a favorable impression on the House naval committee that they had recommended a practical doubling of the capacity of the Torpedo Station, and this will be of great advantage to the city.

We have actually started a new police station to be located in the best place for it, in a more sanitary and a more suitable location than if it had been put on the south side of Market square, and the city will save $15,000. This is not a mistake. We have started an investigation of the water works and today the people are nearer than ever before to having their grievances adjusted. We have at last an efficient Board of Health, with which the mayor has worked in harmony and which has accomplished tangible results. Business had improved, better freight rates and postal facilities have been secured and a better credit system is now being established. We have come much nearer to a new railroad depot than ever before. Former President Mellen said "You ought to have had a new station years ago and you would have had one if anything had been done by the city to secure it."

The Board of Aldermen has done a great deal of business. Under former administrations the board had 10-minute sessions. This year the sessions have been two and three hours long, and much more attention has been paid to the city's business. As a result there has been a careful supervision of every department, of the expenditures, the purchasing of supplies and the transfer of appropriation. The taxpayers will find when the reports are made that the city has been run very economically that the work has been well done and that several departments will turn back balances.

Speaking of the condition of the city, morally, Mayor MacLeod said we have shown that we have been able to run the city decently and in a way not to interfere with business. The police force has been very much improved by the examinations instituted by the mayor, whereby the best qualified, physically and intellectually, have been selected for appointment. Under the new system the city is greatly benefitted, because the men take pride in doing their work.

Gambling has stopped—at least, all the well known places have been stopped—and men have noticed the difference in their business. The mayor quoted a statement of a visitor to him, who asked what the prospects were for next year, the mayor replying that he thought it well to continue the vacation in gambling another year. The visitor said: "Well, I must say you treated all alike. Small places have been open, but it is hard to catch the small ones, but none of them have dared to run openly and continuously." In regard to the social evil, the mayor said he had consulted with men of the world, social workers and business men, and had tried to do the best he could, without severely interfering with the general tone of the community.

In speaking of his program for the coming year Mayor MacLeod said he could not promise to accomplish anything, but he would promise to work for many things for the best interest of the city. He would continue to work for a new railroad station and to hold the railroad company to its promise. He would work for transfers on the street railways, with the co-operation of the Board of Trade, and hoped this desirable change would be effective. He would continue to work for the establishment of a great naval centre in Narragansett bay, feeling sure that on a scientific plan, one thing at a time can be asked for and secured, and in time Newport will become the greatest naval centre on the coast.

He would continue the water investigation until the long delayed relief is obtained. He would also work for an investigation of the city gas, with the view of obtaining a better quality at a fair price. He would work for road improvements on the Point, not the former proposition of the extension of Washington street but the improvements, possibly to Third street, which would be more generally acceptable and not involve the city in litigation. He would work for the widening of Bath road. We should select the most feasible plan and try to bring about the widening as soon as possible. We should continue the work of motorizing the fire department. We have made a good beginning and Chief Kirwin has said that he would recommend a motor pumping apparatus for next year. With these we shall have made an excellent beginning.

Mayor MacLeod spoke also of changes in the city charter, including a two-year term, instead of one, for city officials; a more advantageous purchasing system, a change in the law that will rid the city of the voting booths, a change which would bring about a greater harmony between the departments, a board of purchase and supplies, to standardize supplies and save money. The mayor should do all he can to co-operate with everybody for the progress of the city. He must make the move for progress. We have waked up and have several forces working together in harmony. In conclusion the mayor said he is not afraid to compare his record of one year with any single year of his predecessor.

NO RELICS WANTED.

First-Class and Up-to-Date Schoolhouse Needed in Newport.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Some weeks ago the citizens of Newport were being entertained by the Board of Aldermen, as they met to meet again, to make sure that $10,000 of Newport's money would be spent for the best interest of the city and its fire department. Had some member of this august body suggested buying a second-hand piece of fire apparatus at $20,000 he would have clearly betrayed his fitness for the Council, which suggestion happily did not develop, thus saving the ballot from further disfigurement.

Newport needs a first-class schoolhouse, so says the School Committee whose legal right and function it is to attend to these matters. Immediately a faction in our Council find an opportunity to use Newport for a good thing, and miniature southern republic politics prevail. Second-hand coffins, second-hand battleships, second-hand schoolhouses, must be bought, to suit who and what?

Let the men of this city ask themselves the question: What motive would impel the majority of the Council to usurp the power of the school board, whose only and legal right it is to say where a schoolhouse should be located. It is not that the board is unfit to perform its duty; the voters have endorsed their ability time and time again by returning them to office. It is not that the Hazard Memorial School site is a desirable location, as any one knows who has with fear and trembling for the children watched them steal across the Parade. It is not a sanitary point of view that suggests the Hazard Memorial, as any one may learn on investigating conditions when the theatres are let out at night. It is not an up-to-date building in any sense of the term—22 years old. These years have added immensely to the construction and ventilating of schools.

Then why are we asked to add another curio to our city, at such enormous expense? The Old Stone Mill is still good as an attraction. What Newport wants and needs is a first-class, up-to-date schoolhouse and not a discarded backyard relic. Would any of the councilmen invest one dollar of his own without first investigating his purchase. Yet the taxpayers are asked to vote $100,000 for something, which, judging from the outside, is not worth one third of the money. Why did not the Council have the advice of a competent architect and builder before submitting it to the voters. No, that would be its finish.

Be sure you vote No Tuesday.

Take from the bread dough, when ready to mold into loaves, as much as would make one small "brick" loaf. Into it work one egg, beaten with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, using a spoonful or so of flour if too sticky to handle, but only as much as is absolutely necessary. Roll out on floured board until half an inch thick, then cut in circles with a large cup or cutter. Have ready some thick apple sauce which has been stewed with raisins, a half cupful to a pint, until the latter are very tender. Wet the edges of a circle, in the centre put one or more spoonfuls of sauce, cover with a second circle and pinch the edges firmly together. Place an inch or more apart on greased pans, let stand until the dough begins to rise, then brush the top of each with a little beaten egg yolk and bake in a quick oven.

Turtle Bean Soup.

Pick over, wash and soak one pint of turtle beans over night. Next day drain, cover with two quarts of fresh, cold water and boil slowly, but steadily until the beans begin to break, then add one stalk of celery cut fine, two tablespoonfuls chopped onion and the same amount of chopped carrot, one teaspoonful of salt and a dozen peppercorns; cook for an hour longer. Press through a sieve, rubbing hard to get as much pulp as possible. Return to the fire and if very thick dilute with a little boiling water. Mix one tablespoonful of flour to a thin paste with cold water, add to the soup and stir until it boils again; this will prevent settling in tureen or soup plate. Taste to see that it is well seasoned. For each person allow one-quarter of a hard boiled egg and a slice of lemon; these may be placed in the plate and the soup added, or may be passed after the soup is served. When taken from the fire add to the soup two tablespoonfuls of sherry and serve at once.

THE CHEERFUL OLD CODGER TELLS WHY

A little idea came down out of the blue,
And nearer and brighter and larger it grew.
It shimmered and glittered and shone as it flew
Into my brain to rest.
Made itself there a nest,
My little idea.

Then life grew much sweeter and so full of joy
My old heart again was the heart of a boy,
Fatigue non-existant, my work was a toy.
And I went on my way,
Slept all night, sang all day,
And time passed me by.

Then I said: "But the world must know of this thing.
Such happiness, glory and help it will bring,
Making old weariness break forth and sing,
Filling full heart and brain,
Bringing youth back again
To tired and old."

But—nobody wanted my little idea,
And some of my friends looked at me with fear.
And others said sadly "He's growing so queer;"
And they said: "Now just don't
For we can't and we won't
Be bothered with this."

So I and my idea keep house together,
Sheltered so snug from the wind and the weather.
My heart and hopes just as light as a feather;
And I thank the good Lord
For his Book and his Word
And the idea.

MACLEOD OR BOYLE?

As candidates for the mayoralty Messrs. MacLeod and Boyle stand before the people each on his own record. Do the voters prefer the conduct of the city's affairs and the tone of civic life under the one-year administration of the former, or the conditions existing during the many years of the latter in office? Do they like better what has been done, or attempted to be done, during the present year, or what was done, or not done, in the years that are gone? Has there been enough of change enough of improvement, under the present mayor, to warrant giving him the one year more for which he asks, or shall we simply add another year to the long list of the former executive? Shall we endorse the one and give him another chance, or shall we return to the other?

Will you, Mr. Voter, cast your ballot for MacLeod or for Boyle?

PRICES AND POLITICS.

Of course the present prices of food are affording great satisfaction—politically speaking—to the Republicans and are undeniably causing anxiety to the Democrats. The latter promised to reduce the cost of living by reducing duties, and the cost of living is still going up. On the one hand the Attorney General is arranging to investigate the beef trust to go business with a view to finding out if food is cornered, and on the other Republican members of the House are offering resolutions to find out why the Underwood tariff has not lowered the cost of living, and why the people are not reaping the benefit of cheaper Australian meat if the Navy Department is.

These two resolutions are not harmonious. One assumes that there has been no reduction in the price of meats since the duty was removed. The other alleges that there is a reduction in the price to the navy but not to individuals. In regard to the latter point it is quite clear that if any individual were in a position to advertise for proposals for 285,000 pounds he would probably secure the benefit of a competitive price. If he wishes two pounds for his dinner he goes to his usual market and buys from a dealer who must buy of the Chicago packers because they have agencies near him and can sell him the amount for which his trade calls, and he cannot very well order from Melbourne or Buenos Ayres. In other words, foreign meats have not come in sufficiently to affect the market. Possibly they may never. Some people tell us that Australia and Argentina cannot supply enough to affect our markets perceptibly. Perhaps in six months we may have a different situation.

At present the joke is on the Democrats, but does any one suppose that if the duties on meats and eggs were restored the prices would be lower? The removal of the duties cannot have raised prices; it may or may not after some lapse of time reduce them. Very likely the tariff has had less to do with both prices than the Democrats imagined, just as it may have had less to do with high wages than Republicans have represented.

"MENTALLY UNUSUAL" PUPILS.

If the demand for special instruction for pupils in the public schools continues at the present rate it will not be long before request will be made for individual teaching for every scholar. This undoubtedly would be advantageous, but it is manifestly impossible to provide a teacher for every pupil or even one for so small a number that each might have what would be practically individual work.

The demand for special instruction has been due to the discovery made of late that a large proportion of children are abnormal in some way, and consequently not able to keep up with those members of their class who are normal. This discovery is the result of the special activities in recent years along the line of public school teaching, with a view to increasing the efficiency of the department in training the youth of the land. The discoveries, however, are attaining such proportions as to be rather discouraging, as they indicate that a point is being reached where it will be impossible, or virtually so, to give the personal attention which it is claimed is needed by pupils in order to furnish them the suitable advantages.

It would seem from the tendency of the times as though the graded system were being threatened and the schools were tending back toward the old plan of individual instruction, only along lines which make the situation more analogous to that in private institutions, where pupils receive more personal attention than is common or possible in the public schools at present. What the result of such a step would be it is difficult to estimate. It would of course be desirable if it were possible, but its impossibility is evident. Therefore the tendency seems a bad one and it would appear to be necessary that some limit be placed upon such a division of the work of teaching as requires personal attention to each member of a class.

Incidentally, the idea might easily obtain that public school pupils are becoming weaklings and defectives, or are already in that condition if it is no new development. It certainly is surprising. If not distinctly disconcerting, to be told by the United States Bureau of Education, or the authority of a member of the faculty of Yale University, that 12 of every 100 pupils at the threshold of the public schools are "mentally unusual" and need special treatment apart from other children. Is this a development of the present day, or have the children of other generations been in the same condition and the facts not been known? Are the children of today more defective than those of earlier times? Is there more need now than ever before for special and individual instruction in the schools? What is the trouble and how is it to be remedied?

These are pertinent and reasonable questions and there is grave need of intelligent and reliable answers to them. Upon these answers depends in large measure probably the future of the public schools and the character of the teaching to be done in them. It would seem as though to provide for this large number of children who are "mentally unusual" it would be necessary to change radically the character of the teaching and the methods employed in the schools. If the conditions described really exist the educators of the country have some serious and complicated problems before them for solution, and school committees will also have some serious thinking and planning to do to make the required provision for all those "unusual" pupils. The situation challenges the attention not only of educators but also of the people generally. It demands some adequate solution speedily, so that the schools may do all they should for the children, and do it in the right way.

THE DISPOSITION OF BANKING RESERVES.

Senator Owen believes his currency bill will keep money away from New York and therefore discourage speculation, and the people of the West and South are terribly afraid of stock speculation. People who live near Wall street are not much disturbed by it. Most of them think it dangerous and let it alone, and they are rarely conscious of being affected by the speculations of others, though of course there are conditions under which Wall street speculation affects general business. These are much rarer, however, than is supposed by great thinkers who live two thousand miles away from Wall street.

Owen believes that by the device of regional reserve banks he can concentrate the banking reserves enough for legitimate business and not enough for speculation. The opponents of his bill desire a central bank, or at most not more than four regional reserve banks, in order to concentrate the deposits where they can be of the most used to business. Owen says that wouldn't do at all, because the concentration would bring the surplus funds of the country where the wicked gamblers could secure possession of them.

Of course it is plain enough that by requiring the reserves to be carried in a dozen regional reserve banks instead of in reserve and central reserve cities the banks would not be obliged to keep as much money in New York as they do now, but they now keep a great deal more than their reserves. They keep money in New York so that they can make remittances for their customers, and money for which they do not happen at the moment to have demand at home because it can always be used there.

It is not at all certain, therefore, that Owen will starve out Wall street, as he thinks he can. There are potent reasons why the country banks should keep money in New York banks outside of their reserves, and those will continue to exist after the pending bill shall become a law. It will reduce to some extent the funds flowing from all parts of the country to New York as the financial centre, but it is not unlikely that there will continue to be such a flow that the actual change to be effected by this new currency system will be small.

New York is beginning to find that it has been spending much more money for fire hose than it ought. Before Comptroller Pendergast forced competitive bidding one company held a contract at a rate of $1.20 a linear foot, and the price was the same whether the city purchased 50 or 50,000 feet. When bids recently were opened for 45,000 feet a new company obtained the contract at 68 cents which represents a saving of 43 1-3 per cent. The average yearly purchase of fire hose is about 80,000 feet. It is estimated that in five years, through the closed specification system, which made it impossible for the city to buy from any other than one dealer, the city has lost $250,000.

The continued success of the Mexican revolutionists—Constitutionalists they call themselves—has given a new aspect to Mexican affairs, and it is believed in Washington that if General Carranza overthrows Huerta and assumes the presidency he will be recognized by President Wilson as provisional president, pending an election by the people. Huerta's decree doubling stamp duties goes into operation today and its effect upon his regime is expected to be of serious importance.

There is plenty for the voters of Newport to do tomorrow, with a mayor, five school committeemen and five aldermen to be elected on the general ticket, at least 13 members of the Representative Council in each ward, and three schoolhouse propositions to be voted upon. Every elector should go to the polls and cast his ballot.

The special session of Congress is ended and the regular began today. The extra session produced only the tariff bill, but more legislation of importance is promised in the regular session, which can be extended indefinitely.

The three school propositions are of vital interest to the taxpayers. While two are in opposition to each other, each must be voted upon separately as they appear on the ballot.

Vote early, but not often. Vote!

Mayor MacLeod presents an excellent program for the betterment of the city. What does Mr. Boyle offer?

Be sure and vote on all three school propositions—and especially be sure and vote right.

Cause of Typhoid Infection Still Unaccounted for by Investigators.

Steward of Steamer Rochester on Put-in-Bay Trip Says Seat of Trouble is Hard to Find.

Mr. Walter L. Day of Alexandria Bay, N. Y., who was steward of steamer Rochester on the Put-in-Bay trip in September, was a visitor to Newport Sunday, calling on Senator Sanborn and dining with the Daily News representative on that trip. He has been in the state three or four days, examining into the typhoid epidemic in the interests of the company, which has itself been conducting an investigation in addition to those by the government and the state. Mr. Day said that he had traveled more than 4,000 miles already in trying to gather the facts, and thus far his company is as much at a loss to account for the trouble as the other investigators.

He brought with him to Newport a great mass of letters and affidavits bearing on the matter, which he showed as proof that the seat of the trouble had not been unearthed. He said the management had directed that the subject be sifted to the end. The Ontario & Richilieu is a big and powerful company, running many boats, and feels badly that one of its boats should be suspected of such a source of trouble.

Mr. Day said, in regard to the letter which he wrote, denying that Cook George Yost had typhoid, that he had not heard the facts when he wrote the letter and that he himself had to go and seek him out. He also stated that the only other member of the crew of 127 people to be affected was the stewardess, who had died. The line of infection here is believed to have been solved, but now other members of the party were infected and yet some, especially the crew, escaped, is not understood.

Among the papers which Mr. Day showed were some which would seem to prove conclusively that the food supply could be eliminated, as the boards of health have given the supply places a clean bill. The water which was used on board the boat was taken from parts of the lake which would seem to assure its purity and the tanks have been tested to make sure that none leached in from the ballast tanks.

Mr. Day said the government is now investigating infection from steamer Huron, which was talked of for the Rhode Island party, and another boat running out of Sandusky. He also said that typhoid had broken out among regular troops who were on duty at Put-in-Bay during the celebration period. He himself has been to Put-in-Bay and secured a sample of the water on the common for analysis.

The government inspector is now working in the lake region and he and Mr. Day have been baffled in the same way. They would think that possibly it was the same thing or place, but when they worked on a certain line they would find nothing but contradiction. The same trouble was found in Newport, by tabulating the various cases, and even the disease has had many puzzling features and been full of contradictions.

The cook has had a relapse and has been in very bad condition. In his affidavit he says he quit work Thursday afternoon, at Detroit he had a doctor, and at Buffalo he did not go at once to the hospital.

Mr. Day left for Providence, where he is to continue looking up the Rhode Island end of the case with Dr. Swartz of the State Board of Health. He expressed great regrets over the affair, for he said it had been a delightful trip.

COLONEL SLAVENS'S WORK.

New Military Prison at Fort Leavenworth Completed Under Commandant.

[Leavenworth, Kas., Post.]

Being a year and six months overdue for foreign service, Colonel Thomas H. Slavens, commandant of the military prison, Fort Leavenworth, will within the next month or two be relieved to succeed Colonel Webster Vinson, quartermaster's department, in the Philippine Islands.

Captain Slavens came to Fort Leavenworth in March, 1908, for the purpose of building the new military prison, for which Congress had appropriated $645,000. Since that time the big institution has been practically completed, but now represents a value of nearly four times the appropriation, something which alone can be attributed to the ability and genius of Colonel Slavens.

Probably no other officer in the United States army now has such an enviable record as that of the prison commandant. With limited means he has given this country one of the finest prisons in the world, which will always stand a monument to his exceptional ability as a constructing engineer. Not only is the Fort Leavenworth prison the largest of its kind, but a model institution in every respect, and during the recent visit of Secretary of War Garrison and Major Leonard Wood, on an inspection tour, it was given the highest possible praise.

Secretary Garrison was especially profuse in his praise of the prison's management, and expressed the opinion that nowhere was there a better managed institution of the kind. These views were shared by Major General Wood, who personally congratulated Colonel Slavens on what he had accomplished with such a handicap.

When Colonel Slavens took charge of the construction of the new prison he realized quickly that, to accomplish his purpose with the means at his disposal, strict economy necessarily would have to be practiced, and as much work as possible exacted from the men without taxing them. Therefore his first step was to equip a stockade where militaray prisoners could be employed, and it was in this stockade that there soon was in operation much labor saving machinery—a brick plant, lime kiln, saw mill and stone crusher.

Stone with which the prison and its walls were constructed was quarried on the government reservation by prisoners. Government horses hauled it and prisoners placed it under the personal direction of the commandant. With rapid strides, therefore, the huge walls began to tower, until now all are in place and comprise one of the finest specimens of work of this kind in existence.

THE WEATHER.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Forecast for Boston and vicinity—Unsettled, probably with occasional rain tonight and Tuesday; moderate easterly winds.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Forecast for Southern New England—Continued unsettled weather tonight and Tuesday, probably with occasional rain; moderate winds mostly east and southeast.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Forecast for northern New England—Local rains or snows tonight or Tuesday; moderate variable winds.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

During the past 24 hours there has been much unsettled and showery weather in the central valleys and eastern districts, and rain is still falling at many stations in northern and eastern New England, the Lake region and the Missouri valley. The pressure is still high in the Northeast, a ridge of high pressure extending from the Middle Atlantic states northeastward to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. A disturbance is apparently central some where over the Atlantic ocean, in the vicinity of Bermuda. A weak depression overlies the middle Mississippi and Ohio valleys. A high pressure area is entering the North Pacific states. The temperature is generally near or above the seasonal average in all reporting districts except the Canadian Northwest. In New England the lowest during last night was 24 degrees at Greenville, Maine. In New York city at 8 a. m. it was 38, Boston 38, Washington 40, Jacksonville 66, New Orleans 64, St. Louis 50, Chicago 52, Kansas City 52, Denver 36, Salt Lake City 32, San Francisco 54 and Portland, Oregon 44.

UNSETTLED RAINY WEATHER.

Another week of bad weather is predicted for the eastern part of the country. The eastward movement of a disturbance now over the lower Arkansas valley will result in a continuance of the unsettled, rainy weather during the early days of the week over the eastern half of the country. Generally fair weather will follow for a day or so, but the eastward movement of another marked disturbance now over Arizona will probably be attended by rains over the southern and rains and snows over the northern districts from the Rocky Mountains eastward, reaching the East about Thursday or Friday. This disturbance will be followed by fair and colder weather which will reach the Eastern states by the end of the week. However, temperatures will not be unusually low.

MARRIED AT "WAYSIDE."

Quiet Wedding of Miss Laura Swan and Mr. Andrew Robeson.

The marriage of Miss Laura Patterson Swan, daughter of Mrs. Elisha Dyer, to Mr. Andrew Robeson, Jr., of Boston took place this morning at "Wayside," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Dyer on Bellevue avenue. The wedding was very quiet, with only immediate relatives present. Neither bride nor groom had an attendant.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Emery H. Porter, D. D, rector of Emmanuel Church, in the library, and was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Dyer, Mrs. Andrew Robeson and Miss Harriet Robeson, mother and sister of the groom. There were no decorations. The bride, who was given away by Mr. Dyer, wore a traveling gown of voile and a large velvet hat.

Shortly after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Robeson left "Wayside" in an automobile and boarded steamer General at Long wharf, on their way to New York, whence they will sail Wednesday for Paris for an indefinite stay.

SMITH CASE SET FOR MONDAY

Grand Jury Charged and Many Assignments Made for Trial.

Argument as to Date for Hearing in the Mayer Will Case Interrupted by Recess.

At 11:30 this morning Deputy Sheriff DeBlois escorted Judge Brown to the bench, and opened the December session of the superior court with the prescribed proclamations. There was a good attendance of counsel, including several from Providence.

Assistant Attorney General Ham at once made announcement as to the criminal docket. Cases against Samuel Morgan, James E. Minkler and Patrick H. Welch were set for trial December 3.

He then took up the case against Charles B. Smith, moving that it be set for trial (in Providence) next Monday. Mr. Burdick objected. He has cases to try here. Mr. Ham said a remedy for that would be to have the case removed back to Newport for trial. The Providence docket is crowded. The court asked if an order had been entered, transferring the case to Providence. It had not, and the court said the case was still here. Mr. Burdick said he would have the order entered at once. The court said no motion is necessary to set the case for trial. Mr. Ham said there is another lawyer for defendant, and the business of the attorney general's department calls for the trial at this time. He gave Mr. Burdick notice that he will set the case for trial December 8.

Candidates were called for grand jury duty as follows, 21 responding: Michael Driscoll, Patrick L. Sullivan, Harry D. Gilman, Gerold F. Rogers, Daniel F. Hayes, Patrick F. Harrington, Samuel Ross, Philip A. Sweet, Joseph Galbraith, Nicholas F. Petersen, Adoniram J. Barker, George S. Oxx, Newport; Robert F. Stoddard, Middletown; George R. Manchester, Rowland S. Chace, Portsmouth; James O'Connell, James Holden, Tiverton; Erastus S. Bailey, Little Compton; George W. West, Jamestown; Ezra B. Dunn, Nicholas Ball, New Shoreham.

Mr. Driscoll said he is 71, and at his request he was excused. Mr. Rogers said: "I vote down here, but my home is in Providence." Mr. Harrington didn't know who paid his tax; he asked nobody to do it and had not done it himself. "You may step off," said the court. Mr. Sweet was in a like situation and received a like discharge. Mr. Ross owns real estate, but it is mortgaged and his wife is the one who knows of his financial standing; he does not. He told the best he could and was accepted.

Mr. Barker is an old soldier, and exempt from taxation. This raised a constitutional question which the court and Mr. Ham and Mr. Sheffield hunted up. It was decided that the constitution requires that a man must be taxed in order to be a juror, and Mr. Barker was excused. Mr. Stoddard had a mortgage which made his eligibility doubtful; he was later excused from serving.

The other sixteen were sworn in, Mr. Ball was appointed foreman, and Judge Brown charged the grand jury, which was escorted out at 12:23 by the veteran attendant, Romeo.

The court then called the motion docket. Several cases were continued, many passed.

John P. Fritz vs. Ainsworth H. Cochrane was set for trial December 15.

James H. Almy vs. Alfred Peckham, alias, December 11.

John M. Friend vs. Marco A. Russo, December 10.

Ernest Weston vs. Mrs. Herbert Northup, December 16.

Ann L. Pendleberry et. al. vs. Isaac Brown, treasurer, trial December 17.

In Johanna A. Connolly vs. Mary Corson, Mr. Nolan and Mr. Burdick argued as to date of trial and the matter was passed.

Louise Andriesse vs. John M. Taylor, City Treasurer, trial December 15.

Alena Belle Tripp vs. Edwin I. Tripp, discontinued.

Jose Serpa vs. Frank Grinnell trial, December 15.

George D. Lewis appt., vs. Henry G. Douglass, admr., trial December 17.

In Paul Chase vs. Rachel H. Cram, Mr. Waterman desired trial this term—any day. The clerk said there are 10 cases for Wednesday. This will take two days. Mr. Waterman said he had been here for a year and unable to obtain a trial. There should be some way to have an equity case heard in Newport county. The court said Judge Stearns would go to Kingston next week, and there is a session in Bristol the week after that. It was agreed that notice will be given Mr. Waterman, who agreed to go on at 24 hours' notice.

In the cases of Robert and Carrie Brown vs. New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, Mr. Frost asked that plaintiff be required to state whether Mrs. Brown was on or off the train, when the alleged accident occurred (in Fall River). Mr. Levy claimed that the declaration is sufficient as it is. He will amend it by December 8 and the Carrie Brown case was set for December 15.

Henry Bedlow et al., vs. John C. Burke et alios came up on motion to assign for trial. Judge Burke was ready, but Mr. Harvey said not all those interested are yet in the case. Judge Burke didn't see who they were; he had appeared for all known to have any interest. The matter was left open.

Mary Elizabeth Porter took the stand in the case against Albert H. Porter, to testify in relation to a motion for allowance. She said her husband is keeper of the Dutch Island light, securing $55 a month wages, his rent free, also coal and lights. Witness has just finished paying bills for her illness; she is now cooking at $6 a week. She would be glad to have $5 a week from her husband. She has been forced to keep at work, although not able, and has no money to buy clothing.

Respondent took the stand. His mother lives with him. He is in debt. He has to have some one with him and run the house. Cannot see how he can pay $5. The court said "This woman isn't well; pay a counsel fee of $25, pay this woman $5 today, and $5 each week thereafter."

Mr. Burdick said respondent had absolutely no money today. "Very well," said the court, "pay $10 next week, and $5 each week thereafter."

Judge Burke then returned to the Bedlow will case, contending that he represents all those in interest. He represents the estate and will defend the will. He went over the names, stated by Messrs. Sheffield and Harvey. He never knew legatees to be served in such a case. The statute says those "who entered appearance in the probate court" shall be served. Judge Burke said 90 acres of land are being held up.

The court said there should be speedy determination of the case. Judge Burke said he would like trial December 11. "That's a jury day," said Mr. Harvey. "This is a jury case; I've claimed a jury trial," said Judge Burke. Then Mr. Sheffield claimed that the probate court had no jurisdiction; the case should have been sent to some other probate court for trial.

The court interrupted for a recess, to 2:30 p. m.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Kenyon & Smith Make Many Changes to Accommodate Meat Business.

Kenyon & Smith have added meat to their grocery and provision business, and for this addition have installed an expensive refrigerating plant, including ice boxes and cold display counter. Thousands of dollars have been expended in putting in equipment to make it sanitary, convenient and attractive. The entire north side of the store has been given up to the new departure and among the changes is a plate glass window on the Collins streets corner which permits a view of the display without entering.

The display counter reaches nearly the length of the store, and this, in enamel trays, are shown the various cuts of meat. A glass shield in front keeps the meats from being handled by customers, and at the back are the pipes through which the cold brine circulates and keeps the meats in perfect condition. The boxes are large and may be kept at even temperature. At present the plant relies on city water, but an artesian well is to be sunk.

On the counter are three electrically lighted scales, registering in plain view of the customer. In fact, the most up-to-date fittings have been employed throughout, the corned beef box being of concrete and marble slabs being used wherever they are adapted to market needs. The meat, butter and corned beef boxes are so built that they may be washed with streams of water and thoroughly scrubbed in all parts. The establishment will hereafter be known as the Newport Public Market.

"NERVY" BURGLARS.

Enter General Wetherell's House But, Seeing Mrs. Wetherell, Escape.

It seems a trifle "nervy" for burglars to invade the home of a former police commissioner and a man who was for years prominent in the state militia, yet that is what was done Saturday evening, when the residence of General John H. Wetherell, on Kay street, was entered. It was early—about 8:30. Mr. Wetherell had an attack of the grip which confined him to the house and Mrs. Wetherell was in bed, with her nurse lying down in her room. Hearing a noise in the nurse's room, Mrs. Wetherell arose, only to find the nurse quietly sleeping at the foot of her bed. She looked into the next room and saw two men searching about the place with the help of an electric flashlight. When they saw Mrs. Wetherell they ran down stairs and escaped.

The police were at once notified by telephone and Inspector Tobin and Officer Palmer went to the house. It was found entrance had been made by the front door, a jimmy being used. There were two men and, as nearly as Mrs. Wetherell could tell, they were about 25 years of age.

SATURDAY'S WEDDINGS.

Miss Gladding and Mr. Willard Miss Burnett and Mr. Cross.

The marriage of Miss Gertude Gladding, daughter of Mrs. Lewis A. Barlow, to Mr. Myron Waldo Willard, of Chicago took place Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Barlow on Pleasant street. A large number of friends gathered to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Arthur Crane, pastor of the First Baptist John Clarke Memorial Church. The house was decorated with palms and ferns and brilliantly illuminated with electric lights.

The bride, who was given away by her step-father, Mr. Barlow, wore a gown of white silk over white messaline and a veil trimmed with Chantilly lace caught with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendant was Miss Myra Borden, who wore pink silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Henry W. Boudreau. The wedding music was rendered by Miss Elsie Duby.

A reception followed the ceremony at which a collation was served. Among the guests were Mr. Samuel Dennis of Mystic, Conn., grandfather of the bride, who is in his eighty-third year; Mr. Ernest Gladding of Dupont, Wash., uncle of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dennis of Providence, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dennis of Pawtucket, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dennis of Wareham, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Wanton M. Gladding of New Bedford and Mr. Byron Rand of Everett.

The bride was the recipient of many gifts, including a chafing dish and coffee percolator from the employes of the Telephone Exchange, where she had been employed, and a silver tea service from the parents of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard left on the 9:13 train for Providence on their way to Philadelphia, where they will reside for the present. A large number of the guests accompanied them to the railroad station to give them a hearty send-off.

At St. George's Church Saturday afternoon Miss Elizabeth Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Burnett of Belfast, Ireland, was married to Mr. William Cross, formerly of London England, and now of New York. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. John W. Burnett, of this city, and the ceremony, performed by Rev. George Vernon Dickey, rector of the church was witnessed largely by Mr. Burnett's friends.

The bride was unattended but the groom was attended by Mr. Benjamin Hirsch of New York. Mr. C. LeRoy Grinnell rendered a musical program on the organ, including the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with Irish lace and seed pearls and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, her entire costume having been brought with her from Belfast.

Mr. and Mrs. Cross started later on their wedding trip and will reside in New York until New Year's, when business will necessitate going to Chicago to make their permanent residence.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mrs. J. Mitchell Clark is at the Muenchinger-King.

—Mr. Andrew R. Winslow of Boston is at the La Forge cottage.

—The district superintendent, Rev. W. I. Ward of Providence, will hold the Third Quarterly Conference with the Methodist Episcopal churches of this city and Middletown this week.

—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt closed "The Breakers" Sunday and went to New York for the winter. She had expected to keep her Newport residence open until after Christmas, but changed her plans.

—Mrs. M. A. Van Beuren entertained at dinner at "Sunnyfields Farm" Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Van Beuren and their guests, Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander and Mr. Carlos de Florez, returned to New York Sunday.

—Rev. and Mrs. Gustavus A. Hulbert left Sunday evening for Brookside, N. J., to visit Mr. Hulbert's parents. Rev. Mr. Hulbert will return the latter part of the week, to occupy the pulpit of the United Congregational Church next Sunday.

—Reliable news comes from the bedside of Dr. C. F. Barker at the Newport Hospital, that he continues to improve and to gain in strength. Sunday afternoon he was able to sit up in bed for a short time, and he was allowed to have a little solid food.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Nickerson of Tiverton and their sons, Roy, George and Fred, spent Thanksgiving day with their daughter and sister, Mrs. Jesse L. Durfee. The reunion was the first in four years, as George had been serving in the navy and stationed abroad during that time.

—Captain William L. Rodgers, president of the Naval War College, and Commander George W. Williams, inspector in charge of the Torpedo Station, who have been in New York several days, left today for Washington, to attend an important conference at the Navy Department.

—Chief Gunner Harry Ernest of the Naval Training Station has received preparatory orders for six months' instructions at the Sperry Gyroscope Compass Company in Brooklyn, and from there will be assigned to a ship in the Atlantic fleet for duty in connection with the gyroscope compass. Gunner Ernest is one of the first officers to be assigned for this instruction.

—While the typhoid epidemic in Providence continues to spread, Newport is clear except for the cases at the hospital which came from the Put-in-Bay expedition, though at the time they were coming down there were three local cases which developed for some unexplained reason. These have not been traced to the expedition, and in fact could not have appeared at that time were the infection from that source.

—A month ago Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Lawton was retired as commander of the local division of Naval Reserves, and not yet has the election of a new commander been called for. The command is understood, to be ready to proceed to an election, but must wait for authority to act. The command has been in a state of inactivity which has not been conducive to its well-being, because of delayed action up the river.

ACTUAL WORK IN THE SENATE.

Currency Bill Forced Legislative Wheels to Turn a Little Faster.

Good Roads Proposition—Taboo of New Year's Reception Adds to Wilson's Grievances.

[Washington correspondence of The News.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The last week of the special session was about as busy as any other—more so, in fact in the Senate, for that body actually began consideration of the long delayed currency bill. Only preliminary speeches, the presentation of views of the rival leaders with some desultory discussion have occurred, and in the matter of things the real debate and consideration of the measure in earnest will no begin until after the holidays.

The fact that the currency bill was actually before the Senate—in a somewhat anomalous manner, to be sure—sort of started the legislative wheels a little faster than they had been going on for some time past.

Senator Smith of Georgia and Congressman Moon of Tennessee started a $20,000,000 a year road bill rolling by introducing bills to improve the rural post routes of the country. It is proposed to co-operate with the states in making roads for the farmers. There are many road propositions pending in both Senate and House, but no one can tell just what form government aid to roads will take.

And now Washington has another grievance against the present administration. President Wilson declines to shake hands with 5,000 to 10,000 people on the first of January—that is keep open house that day and receive all corners. It is a custom of as long standing as the White House itself. All officialdom was received at these receptions and then at the citizens who cared to come.

The determination of President Wilson in effect abolishes "moth ball day." The New Year's receptions at the White House brought all the diplomats, the army and navy officers, retired and active, out in uniforms. They wore full dress. The White House smells like a moth ball factory after one of these receptions. To smell of moth balls for a day or two the first of the year means that one has been at the White House reception.

Th Senate cannot get over the habit of talking about the tariff Smoot started it one day, and nearly everybody took a hand. Dr. Gallinger showed his medical training by saying that the Democrats had given the country a "legislative bichloride of mercury tablet" which was slow poisoning, but would work in time.

Senator Stone said that every standpatter was seen going along the streets his lips moving in silent prayer, and it was a petition that a panic or great business disturbance might fall upon the country.

And John Sharp Williams (some time there will be even a little tariff debate in the Senate when Williams does not take a hand, but it will be after Williams is dead) made the assertion that the "world is not run by Senatorial verbalities," which ought to have held them for awhile.

And Charlie Thomas of Colorado suggested that the rise in the price of eggs was because the hens had gone on a strike.

Borah of Idaho made the sensible remark that it is useless to prophesy now, but to wait and see what the tariff really does.

There are 435 men in the House, and no one knows who and what more than 100 of them are—that is, they are not known beyond a limited circle. The fellows who want to be known must get into the limelight. They must do something, either big or small, wise or foolish. Buffoonery has won notoriety, if not fame, for men in Congress, and a man had better be notorious rather than a nonentity.

It is with the greatest satisfaction that Congressmen learn of the manner in which the Underwood candidacy is taking in Alabama. Upon his return from a campaign trip the leader of the House was greeted as the next Senator from Alabama. Some go so far as to say that Hobson will retire before the contest reaches a point where he is shut off from being a candidate for Congress and that he will again be a candidate for the House. Both elections must be held at the same time. Hobson has declared, however, that he is in the fight to the finish. Underwood has said that, whatever happens he will not remain in the House after the close of his present term.

THE CHILDREN'S SAFETY.

Most Important Element in the Selection of a School Site.

To the Editor of the News:

The most important element in the scheme to force the city into buying the St. Joseph's property for a school site is that which concerns the welfare and safety of the children who are to attend it. The danger to crowds of little children in crossing busy Touro street and the Parade is too evident to need any argument. It speaks well for the humanity of the St. Joseph's School authorities that they wish to remove the children under their charge from this danger, but what does it say for the humanity that would transfer that danger to other children in whom they have no special and particular interest but who are still children and human beings? It would be little less than criminal to place the entrance to a public school on Touro street.

This, and the fact that the property offered to the city is not worth one half of what is asked for it, and the still more important fact that it is sought to make of the affair a political issue, which a public school matter should never be, stamp the whole scheme as one of the most shameful propositions that was ever laid before this community.

A familiar burden in many homes.
The burden of a "bad back."
A lame, a weak or an aching back.
Often tells you of kidney ills.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.
Here is Newport testimony.

Mrs. J. Banister, 41 Third St., Newport, R. I., says: "I suffered from severe backache and I had pains through my kidneys. I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for these ailments and they have always relieved me right away. My relatives have used Doan's Kidney Pills and we consider them a fine medicine."

MAY BE LAST GAME.

Fort Greble Makes Three Touchdowns to One for Naval Reserves.

What was possibly the last game of the local football season was played at Wellington park Sunday, in the presence of a large gathering of spectators, Fort Greble won, 19 to 6, making three touchdowns and kicking one goal after touchdown, to a single touchdown for the Naval Reserves.

It was not a bad game. The weather was fine for the spectators but the ground was sodden from the rain and it was impossible to make any speed. This gave the heavy team of Greble an advantage over the lighter Reserves, which were forced to depend on speed. In addition the crowd came on toward the end of the game and so hampered the players that around-the-end runs were impossible. This confined the play to line bucking, in which the heavier team had the advantage. This does not mean that there was any fluke as Fort Greble played the better game and deserved the victory. Still, the same teams playing under different conditions might show an entirely different result.

The one tally of the Reserves was made on an intercepted forward pass by Horgan. The Greble team scored once on a well executed forward pass. Carr, quarter back of the Reserves, had not recovered from his injury of last week and Horgan went in at quarter. When he was injured Cottrell took his place, with a consequent disarrangement of the line and of the plays which was fatal to any hope of success.

Worricks scored two and Beattie one touchdown for the winners, and Beattie kicked one goal after touchdown. Horgan made the only score for the Reserves.

THINK BEFORE VOTING.

Electors Should Use Judgment in Selecting Best Schoolhouse Site.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

It seems to me that "Flat Lux" is taking a rather pronounced way of telling the citizens of Newport which way to vote; surely he will leave the voting to their good judgment.

He stated that the Hazard Memorial School is poorly constructed, out of repair and altogether an undesirable building. Does he know what he is talking about? Newport's best masons and carpenters worked on the building; let "Flat Lux" seek them for information, as he has been wrongly advised.

The building committee of the School Committee made their report and it appeared in the daily paper, dated October 14, 1913, wherein $90,000 was asked for land and a new building thereon, without equipment, which would mean an additional expense to the city later on of about $10,000 for equipment, making the total amount $100,000.

The Hazard Memorial School is offered for $100,000, fully equipped, a good modern building in every respect and it meets the requirements of the times. It is no older than the Lenthal or Carey schools, and these buildings have not been spoken of as antiquated. The Hazard school has a modern plumbing system, an individual sanitary locker system for every pupil, plenty of light, air and sun in every room, and every year money has been expended to keep the school modern. An opportunity now presents itself for the citizens and taxpayers to vote for a school thoroughly up-to-date, and located on one of Newport's best streets, not a side alley. If the old Clarke Street building is demolished, what a fine entrance there will be from Clarke street to the Hazard School, and when the old convent is torn down on Touro street what a noble building will stand forth facing Washington Square park.

Give the School Committee and the members of the building committee a chance to get the location they want, as they were out a year looking up land and at the last meeting of the Representative Council sent in their report deciding upon Mary street; so you can readily see the Hazard School is in about the right spot for them, it being in exactly the same zone having a frontage of over 57 feet, with over 21,000 square feet of land. Had the building committee selected land in a different section of the city, then the law might frown on us, but we are right on the ground selected by them. The Hazard School is there for you to look upon, and you can see what you are getting. Use good common horse sense and if the proposition looks good to you give us your vote, and you will help the little ones by taking them out of crowded schools, whereas if a new school were built it would take over a year for its completion. Think hard and then vote for the best proposition.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

A match carelessly cast aside set fire to some of the furniture in the D. C. Watson cottage on Cole street Sunday morning. The occupants of the building, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Tefft, were able to extinguish the flames without calling out the fire department. The fire was confined to a sofa, which was almost burned before the fire was conquered.

Dr. John H. Sweet and a party spent Sunday at his camp at Beavertail, and despite the lateness of the season made a good catch of tautog from the rocks.

Mr. W. L. Arnold has returned from Lafayette, where he was called by the death of his step-brother, Mr. Bert Garrett.

Mr. Charles Cottrell, who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Ellen Cottrell, has returned to Boston. His brother, Mr. Benjamin S. Cottrell, has left for his business in South Carolina.

Mrs. Andrew Lodkey has left on a short visit to Jersey City.

Mrs. A. C. Landers is visiting friends in New York.

Mrs. Clifford Hathaway of New Bedford is visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Wright on the North Main road.

Dr. Holloway of Newport caught a 10-pound tautog from the rocks at Beavertail Sunday.

Mrs. H. Smith, Miss Brooks, Miss Carr and Mr. Nicholas Carr, who have been spending the Thanksgiving holidays with relatives on the island, have returned to Providence.

A STATEMENT FROM DR. FLYNN.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Dear Sir: I wish to make a statement concerning my candidacy for alderman from the Fifth ward. The idea of running for alderman was a child of my own brain and was not fostered by any man or set of men. Certain rumors are rampant, tending to discredit by chance of being elected, and I wish to state that, if elected, I will be guided by my own judgment and act for the best interest of the city during my tenure of office, and vote on all questions, favoring none. This statement is made to explode these rumors, and I promise that, if elected, I will not be dictated to by any clique or party.

ROGERS HELPED BY NEW PLAYGROUND.

The members of the Rogers High School Athletic Association are planning to send a vote of thanks to the mayor and aldermen for their services in fitting out a field for the football team. At the beginning of the season Rogers had no field on which to play, but through the efforts of Alderman Kirby the Vernon Avenue playground was fitted out. The grounds are suitably located, in better condition than the old Civic League lot, and greatly increased the receipts of the team. Formerly the Rogers management was obliged to do all the manual labor, such as cutting grass, digging post holes and erecting goal posts. This year all this was eliminated by the kindness of Alderman Kirby, who personally superintended the laying out of the field.

MUCH TO CHOOSE FROM.

Closely-Contested Struggle Promised Voters Election Day.

Tuesday will be election day. It will be the eighth under the present charter and, except the first, there will be more for the voter to choose from than there has been since 1896. In addition to the regular candidates for mayor, School Committee, aldermen and councilmen there are three school propositions for the taxpayers and a number of vacancies, one in the School Committee, one in the Council for the First ward and two each in the Second, Third and Fourth wards. Voters should not vote for more than four for School Committee for the regular term, not more than 13 councilmen for the three-year term, and not more than one for any other office.

The News printed the full list of candidates Saturday. The polls open at 6:30 a. m. and close at 6:30 p. m.

The work is on. The candidates, now that Sunday is passed, have settled down to the strenuous task of interesting individual voters, and with good weather it promises to be a closely contested struggle all along the line. There are 449 fewer names on the ward lists than last year, but that was a Presidential year.

INTERRUPTED BY A WEDDING PARTY.

Dr. Flynn's campaigning automobile was on Washington square Saturday evening while both Mayor MacLeod and former Mayor Boyle were talking, but those who came in the machine gave the same noiseless attention to the speakers as every one else. The remarks by Mr. Boyle were twice interrupted, both times by a jolly wedding party bound to and from the New York boat. The campaign was suspended while the party passed and every one excused them; they did not intend to interrupt, but they were not electioneering.

THE OPERA HOUSE FILLED FULL.

Very many were unable to find room in the Opera House Sunday night. The early comers filled the house so that those coming in after 8 were obliged to be content with the balcony and gallery. These were soon filled, and in obedience to the fire laws the fireman notified the management that no more could possibly be admitted, when there were several hundred waiting outside. These laws were made for the protection of the people as a whole, and it seems well that even in a campaign rally the officers charged with the duty of protecting the people are alive to their duties.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1, Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Copper at 68⅝, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 98, Canadian Pacific 228¾, Erie 28⅝, Great Northern preferred 123½, Louisville & Nashville 130, Missouri Pacific 24⅝, Northern Pacific 108¼, Pennsylvania 108⅝, Reading 160, Southern Pacific 87⅜, Union Pacific 148⅝, United States Steel 64⅛, United States Steel preferred 104⅜, Westinghouse Electric 53⅜.

10:45—A few stocks which were influenced by special considerations moved widely in the early trading today, but the market as a whole was narrow and dull. Filing of the government's suit against the American Can Company after the close Saturday, depressed the Can stocks, but selling was not heavy and declines of the common and preferred shares were only about a point. Goodrich preferred strengthened by the official statement that no reduction in the dividend had been contemplated, rose 2 points. New Haven and Canadian Pacific advanced 1, while Louisville dropped 1¾ on a single transaction. Most of the leading speculative shares were a shade lower.

Noon—Underlying firmness was apparent throughout the forenoon stock market, although business continued on a limited scale. Hesitation in the early period gave way gradually to a better tone and ultimately the average of prices was raised fractionally above Saturday's close. Only a temporary influence was exerted by the obviously unfavorable features of the situation, such as the government's suit against the American Can Company, the exceptionally poor bank statement Saturday and the heavy losses in October net earnings by railroads. Possibility of Supreme court decisions today in important cases hindered confident operations, as did conditions in the money market. Call loans renewed at 8 per cent, and time rates were higher. Can stocks grew weaker as lack of inside support became apparent and by noon prominent preferred shares were between 2 and 3 points lower. Their decline gave the whole market an easier tone. Bonds were irregular. Money on call, strong, at 8 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 5¾ and 5⅞ per cent. Exchanges, $269,625,417; balances, $34,217,119.

HERBERT WARREN LADD.

Former Governor of Rhode Island Dies at Butler Hospital, Providence.

Active During Two Terms in Promoting Erection and Completion of New State House.

Former Governor Herbert Warren Ladd died at the Butler Hospital, Providence, Saturday afternoon from a cerebral hemorrhage. His health had been poor a long time and for four years he had been undergoing treatment at the hospital.

Governor Ladd was a native of New Bedford, where he was born October 15 1864. During the Civil war he was a newspaper correspondent at the front and later worked on the New Bedford Mercury. He was later employed in a large dry goods house in Boston and in 1871 established the H. W. Ladd Company and opened a store in Providence, which was at one time one of the leading dry goods stores in that city. In 1896 it was overtaken by financial misfortune and the whole stock and the store itself passed into the Shepard Company's hands.

Until he ran for governor, Mr. Ladd was scarcely known in the politics of the city or state. He accepted the nomination of the Republicans for the office in 1899, succeeding Governor Taft. There was no election by the people and Mr. Ladd was chosen governor by the legislature. The next year he was again a candidate, and again there was no election. John W. Davis was that year elected by the legislature. In 1901 Mr. Ladd was again elected governor by the legislature.

In his message when inaugurated governor for the first time Mr. Ladd urgently called for a new State House at Providence. As a result of his argument and persuasion a commission was appointed to recommend a suitable site and to consider plans for the building. Of this body the governor was chairman. The work of the commission extended over a number of years. The preparations for the actual construction of the new edifice steadily going forward. In 1894 the building was begun and from this date until it was finished the governor devoted himself to it with the greatest energy. He was a principal figure at the several ceremonies which marked the progress of the edifice to completion and occupancy.

It is said that Mr. Ladd out of his own resources furnished a considerable amount of money with which to prosecute the work, and in later years an attempt was made to have the state reimburse him for this outlay. Several resolutions carrying an appropriation for this purpose were introduced in the legislature, but action could not be secured on them.

In 1889, at the annual Commencement of Brown University, Governor Ladd announced that he would present an astronomical observatory to the college. The donor expected the complete gift to cost about $25,000. The observatory was built, now standing on Hope street and is said to have cost upward of $10,000.

During his two terms as Governor, Mr Ladd encouraged the building of the Soldiers' Home at Bristol, the movement then beginning in favor of better public highways, the development of the Agricultural Experiment station now known as the Rhode Island State College and the better equipment of the state militia.

The Governor was the founder of the Commercial Club, and for three years its president. He was one of the organizers of the Congregational club and had been an officer of the Board of Trade, president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children as well as a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Rhode Island Choral Association, the Providence Press Club and the Hope Club. At one time he was a director of the Atlantic National Bank.

In 1889 he spent the summer in Newport occupying the estate known as "Mayerott". He entertained President Harrison, the French admiral, Brown de Colstoun, who in cruiser Arathusa was visiting Newport, and later ex-President Cleveland.

In 1892 the degree of master of Arts was conferred upon him by Brown University.

SOLD TO MAYOR MACLEOD.

First of New Red Cross Christmas Seals Brings Twenty-Six Dollars.

The first of the new Red Cross Christmas seals to be sold in Newport was disposed of at auction at the Colonial Theatre Saturday evening, being bid in for Mayor MacLeod for $26. Mr. Arthur B. Commerford was to have been the auctioneer, but was unable to be present, and Mr. H. A. Tufts acted in his place.

The bidding started at 25 and the price was carried up by steps of $1, $2 and $5 until $26 was reached. Then it was raised by smaller amounts to $28, when the seal, in a handsome gold plate frame donated by the Herrmann Company, was knocked down to William MacLeod. The announcement of the successful bidder was greeted with hearty applause.

DEFENDS HIS ADMINISTRATION.

Mayor MacLeod Devotes Saturday Speech to Answering Boyle's Charges.

Sunday He Outlines a Constructive Program of Improvements for Another Year.

Mayor MacLeod answered ex-Mayor Boyle's questions Saturday night, and told his audiences they could look up the newspaper reports at the time, to assure themselves that he was stating facts and that his opponent was wrong in the version he had put upon various acts. The mayor was out again in an automobile, with band escort, and made two addresses from the machine. The first was scheduled at Father Mathew hall, but instead he spoke in front of the building, to a crowd which choked Thames street. The hall was lighted and in readiness, but for the brief talk the street was more convenient. As he left, red fire was burned in front of the building.

He said Mr. Boyle had openly cast suspicions on the acts of the mayor of the present year, but the speaker said all he had done was above board and he was not ashamed of his course. On the police station matter he made a flat contradiction of Mr. Boyle's argument, saying his activity for the north side site was honest, but no mistake. It had saved the city $15,000 and given a site which will always be open on three sides, while the other would be closed on three sides by the coal yard and buildings. It was the Representative Council which voted to purchase it, and it did so unanimously. The north site was not in the market when the Council asked for legislative action to purchase the south site, as it had been held for the Government Landing until it was declared conclusively that it would not be required. He said Mr. Sheffield is not the real owner of the property, but is holding it for a client—who he did not know, but he would venture a guess that it was Senator Wetmore. Architects, sanitary experts and the police have chosen the site purchased as the more desirable one for a police station.

As to naval base, the mayor said he believed credit should go to whom credit is due, and he did not claim full credit. Many worked to advance the cause, but he himself had worked hard. He said he had explained in the fifth ward that when he said "I" he spoke of the work in which he had participated with others. Alderman Hughes introduced the resolution in the Board of Aldermen, but the speaker had a few weeks before, while stumping, proposed similar action. Much work had been done by many, in perfect harmony, and much had been accomplished.

Regarding the railroad station, he replied to Mr. Boyle that greater progress had been made the past year than ever before and any one who had followed the affairs of the New York, New Haven & Hartford of late must realize that the company has no funds to build stations. He said Mr. Boyle claimed to have had a promise to build conditionally eight years ago, but what had been done up to the present year to secure a promise satisfactory to the city? This year one has been secured and there are no strings on it. More than that, a promise has now been secured from the new management to build as soon as the company is in condition to do so. The speaker said Mr. Boyle had become discouraged, but he was not, and it is the one who is not discouraged who secures things. He predicted the city will have a new station inside of another eight years.

As to Mr. Boyle's criticism of the speaker's part in the purchase of the playground in the north part of the city, he said this made him smile. Mr. Boyle had condemned him for not doing the very things which he had done, as the records would show.

Referring to the criticism of the speaker for voting as a member of the Board of Aldermen, he said that when he first took his seat he had declined to vote until he was informed by the aldermen that the mayor always voted, and this was proved to him by referring to the records. He therefore did not make the peculiar interpretation of the charter for which he was criticised, but followed the example of Mr. Boyle, which now would appear to be wrong for Mayor MacLeod and right for Mayor Boyle.

What had he to do with the Washington Street boulevard? The speaker said that when he went into office he found the matter tied up in the courts, where nothing could be done. He had proceeded to get it out of the courts, where the Representative Council could act in the matter if it chose. The court records were cleared of it, but the Council has not been prepared to act, and he explained why. He denied that he had been in collusion with any one in stopping progress on the boulevard, and said that if he thought certain action was right he would proceed regardless of the desires of his supporters. He believed the matter is in much better shape than at the time Mr. Boyle was in office.

As to what he had done while in office he said he had time to speak only in a glancing manner, but would go more into detail Sunday night. Most things he believed the people could discover for themselves by reviewing the year. He did not claim last year to be a reformer nor does he now, but he believed that the present year the city has been a little more respectable and a nicer place in which to live. He believed those things which bring reproach on lieves in legitimate pleasures, but not the city. He claimed that his administration had not been radical, but with due regard to propriety.

He did not care to criticise Mr. Boyle for specific things, but for things which he left undone. He believed that the mayor should be at the front and along the line of progress. Mr. Boyle, he said, is proficient in knowledge of the machinery of the city, but he was not progressive. What the city needs is new blood, and he believed that the people feel that way. They are not satisfied with what they have, but desire to push on. He had hesitated in blowing his own horn but now that his record had been attacked he is ready to defend himself and hoped for one more year.

The mayor took his seat in the machine and as he did so "One more year"

INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE SUFFER.

Boyle Claims Conditions Are Worse Under MacLeod Than Before.

Criticises and Condemns Acts of the Mayor Before a Sympathetic Crowd.

An audience which crowded the Opera House from the footlights to standing room in the gallery greeted former Mayor Boyle when the curtain went up shortly after 8:15 Sunday evening, and for 50 minutes listened carefully and closely to what he had to say, occasionally giving applause or laughing at the situation depicted. It was a good-natured, friendly audience, including many women. Mr. Boyle, who has not seemed strong in his outdoor speeches, seemed to be in his old-time form and spoke easily, without hesitation and in his best manner.

At first Mr. Boyle referred to the police station site and the playground purchase, but soon came to the general condition of the city during the present administration. He claimed it is much worse than under his own administration; that the interests of the people are not so well considered, that there is too much attention to frills and the whims of certain people, referring evidently to the Civic League, and that the wishes of these seem paramount to the interests of the city. He called attention to certain conditions which are different from what they were under him and asked if the change is not for the worse rather than the better. He promised, if elected, to conduct the city's affairs for the best interests of all and not of a few.

That the criticisms of general conditions this year were approved by the audience was evident in many ways. There was no bitterness or rancor in the speech and the big crowd was also in good humor.

When he stepped from the wings to the centre of the stage former Mayor Boyle was greeted with hearty applause. He needed no introduction and began by saying he was gratified at the large gathering, and especially by the large number of women present. He hoped it indicated an aroused interest in local affairs and not a trend to the suffrage. He was one of the old-fashioned sort who believe the place of woman is on her throne at home, secure in the affections of husband, brother, father and others, leaving to men the not pleasant duties of the franchise.

Mr. Boyle regretted that part of the Sabbath had been devoted to politics. He did not invite it; he had no intention of coming out and talking until Mayor MacLeod became impatient for criticism. After a year in the mayor's place, if he has escaped criticism he must be deaf; the speaker had plenty of criticism without calling for any.

He spoke of the police station site and said the mayor's statement had not been satisfactory. He claimed that the latter selected the north side of Market Square in direct opposition to the resolution of the Council and that the records would show this. It was on account of the nature of his answer to his queries on this matter that he said he was eligible to Roosevelt's Ananias Club.

There has been talk in the press that "Boyle is too long in office." This may be so, but part of the blame he would put on the people who elected him. Often he has been reluctant to be a candidate, but at the eleventh hour he had been called upon by his friends to run and had consented, often with reluctance, as he thought some one else should do so. He was in favor of younger men running; he believed there are young men fitted to be mayor, but not the young man who has been mayor this year. His line of action has not been in the right direction.

He criticised the action of the mayor in tying up the purchase of the fire apparatus and then going away, leaving it to the aldermen. If it was right to tie it up it was his duty to stay and keep it tied up. Personally he believed it was the duty of the mayor to facilitate business and not to block it. If he voted in the board it would be to facilitate and not to delay public business.

Only the kindliest feelings exist between the mayor and myself, said Mr. Boyle. He has at times asked my opinion on certain matters and I have gladly given it to him and he has gone and done just the opposite. If I were in his place I would feel like asking advice and opinions. The office of mayor is no pleasant position to fill. The public knows very little of the many problems which confront the mayor. Many things which seem simple are not so simple when one considers the many points from which they must be viewed. It has been inevitable that the mayor should make mistakes and I give him credit for making honest mistakes.

In view of the large number of women in the audience he said he would be circumspect about his treatment of certain lines of action taken by the mayor. This "holier than thou" feeling which pervades some portions of the community had led to certain lines of action in regard to certain matters which had been regulated and segregated in the past, but which it was not attempted entirely to suppress. The result here was the same as in other places; the suppression simply resulted in driving places about the city and hiding them. He held that a proper regulation is more for the good of the community than the course followed. It safeguards the south and prevents them from carrying the marks of disease all their lives. Never before this year had it been necessary for the Board of Health to ask far action to protect the youth of the city, but such demand has been made by the Board of Health this year, though the facts have been suppressed.

There are other matters which come under the same general rule. The speaker said it better to have one or two places properly regulated and under supervision than to have it, as many of his hearers knew it had been this year, driven to dark holes and darker deeds.

The conduct of the mayor has been marked by timidity and vacillation, and he might add something more. He showed his timidity in regard to the lunch cart on Washington square. Every one knew it had no legal right there and could be removed at any time, yet few knew the demands made on the authorities to allow it to remain for the benefit of the public. The mayor took this matter to the Board of Aldermen to make them participants in the removal. He should have ordered it removed without reference to the board.

Many think the city ordinances are easy of enforcement, but the speaker's experience was that very many of them, police regulations really, are not of much use when cases are taken to the higher court. In regard to the clearing

GORTON ANDERSON.

Death of Newport's Oldest Barber, Dating Back to Naval Academy Days.

A Well Known Citizen and the Oldest Member of Rhode Island Lodge.

Mr. Gorton Anderson, for many years in business on Thames street as a barber, died Saturday afternoon at the residence of his son Mr. Vernon B. Anderson, on Mann avenue. He had been in failing health for several months and had been out but little since early last summer. He was born in 1825 and was consequently in his eighty eighth year, his death being due to disease incident to old age.

For nearly 50 years Mr. Anderson was engaged in the barbering business, being first located in the building on Thames street now occupied by the Almy Coal Company, and then in the building now owned by Jacob Aronson, which he purchased in 1864, continuing in business there until about 25 years ago. Later he opened a small shop on Catherine street, where he carried on the business for several years, many of his former patrons following him to his new location. He retired from active business only when the infirmities of age made it impossible to continue longer.

When the Naval Academy was located at Newport in the early sixties Mr. Anderson was in charge of the barber shop connected with the institution, and included among his patrons many naval officers who have since become rear admirals and retired. He was also in charge of the barber shop of the old Bellevue House, which was located on Catherine street. Through his various establishments, at the Naval Academy, the hotel and on Thames street, he had a wide acquaintance with the older generation of business men and summer residents and was universally recognized as a man of high rank in his business.

The deceased had been a member of Rhode Island Lodge of Odd Fellows, 50 years, having joined in 1863 and being at his death its oldest member. When a young man he was interested in the fire department and a member of Engine Company No 3.

Mr. Anderson married Miss DeBlois, a member of a well known Newport family who died about nine years ago. Four children survive—Mrs. Charlotte Cornell, Mr. Vernon B. Anderson, and Miss Mary D. Anderson of this city and Mr. Stephen D. Anderson of New York.

IN CITY'S INTEREST.

Care Should be Used in Voting on the Schoolhouse Propositions.

To the Editor of the News:

The writer has not heard a single person express the opinion that it is for the interests of the city to purchase for a public school the parochial school property on Touro street, but many forceful reasons why this should not be done exist and have been expressed. However gratifying it might be for the owners of the Touro Street property to exchange it for a cool $100,000 in cash, it is inconceivable that any fair-minded person could look upon the transaction as other than disadvantageous for the city and altogether unjustifiable. The reasons for this have been so well stated that there should be no need for rehearsing them here, but the writer fears that there is need for impressing upon the voters the necessity of voting completely upon the school proposition. It is as essential to vote against the proposition disadvantageous for the city as it is to vote in favor of the proposition advantageous for the city.

There is no question that the authority to locate schoolhouses lies in the hands of the School Committee. Nor is there question of the fact that the School Committee is strongly in favor of the Mary Street site. No one can possibly desire that the expenditures stated for the location on Touro street and for the location on Mary street should both be authorized. Every voter should be sure that his ballot is so marked that when all are counted the city will not be placed in an embarrassing and impracticable position.

STRONGLY RELIGIOUS.

Two Numbers from "Jeanne d'Arc" to Be Given by the Oratorio Orchestra.

Charles Francois Gounod, whose great oratorio, "The Redemption," was given successfully last April by the Oratorio Society, and whose "Gallia" was sung at the December concert in 1911, is again to be represented on that society's program at its concert this week, though only by orchestral numbers, these being the overture and prayer, both from "Jeanne d'Arc." Warm welcome was given to the music which Gounod wrote for this drama in verse by Jules Barbier, first performed in Paris in 1873. It consists of melodramas, interludes, choruses, etc., and contains some very interesting pages. In this work, as in another drama of the same sort, "Les Deux Reines de France," brought out in the preceding year, the music is merely an accessory, and the composer is only the humble servant of the poet, when he discreetly aids and supplements.

Gounod was a thorough master of the orchestra, and in the chords, majestic as those of a cathedral organ, is heard the mystic; in the soft and original melodies the man of pleasure. This contrast between two opposing principles may be traced in all his works, sacred or dramatic. The two numbers to be given by the Oratorio orchestra are strongly religious in character. In later life Gounod declared his intention of composing a "Messe a Jeanne d'Arc" on his knees in the Cathedral of Rheims, on the stone on which Joan of Arc knelt at the coronation of Charles VII.

The orchestra, which will make its first public appearance at this week's concert, is composed as follows: Ray Groff, John Hodgson, Miss Jessamine Chase, Mrs. John H. Sweet, Jr., first violins; Harry Kalquist, Miss Dorothy Rooney, Mrs. Alvah H. Sanborn, second violins; Carl Dilcken, viola; George H. Bryant, Ralph Wood, cellos; Ralph Wood, Howard Milne, contrebass; Louis Chase, Joseph W. Blaine, flutes; Michele Catalani, clarinette; A. Livingston Mason, George H. Carr, horns; H. Wood Thompson, organ; Miss Elise Haire, piano.
